An introduction to Islamic theology, customs, philosophy, worldview, culture, scholarship, and history
By Midwest Book Review

Written by a Fellow in Christian-Muslim Relations (St. Ethelburga's Centre, London) with twenty years' experience, Understanding Islam: An Introduction is an introduction to Islamic theology, customs, philosophy, worldview, culture, scholarship, and history, accessible to lay readers of all backgrounds and featuring a fair amount of black-and-white photographs. Author C.T.R. Hewer is a Christian who, despite not personally believing all of the tenets of Islam literally (because doing so would naturally require him to convert), feels that Muslims are cousins in faith and that the moral principles of Islam and exemplary life of Mohammad should be recognized. As a result, Understanding Islam is as unbiased as humanly possible in its straightforward presentation. Enthusiastically recommended particularly for public libraries, and also as a detailed primer for anyone from lay people to scholars seeking to educate themselves about Islam and the people who practice it.

Editor's recommendation

By AMK

I was looking for a book as a present for one of my Christian friends who wants to understand Islam.

One of the Editors of this book, Yahya Michot, professor at Hartford Seminary, told me that "There is nothing in this book you wouldn't agree".

So, without a hesitation I got the book and gave it to my friend. First of all, he was happy with the name of the book. He said "yes, that is all I want: Understanding Islam". He was also glad to learn that the writer is a Christian. In conclusion, if you are looking for a book as a non-muslim, or for a non-muslim this book might be the one you are looking for.
